London, March 20.

THE late Accounts concerning the King of Sweden being very extraordinary, the Publick will best judge how far the following Advices, brought by the last Mail, are to be relied upon, or whether they do not want a further Confirmation.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated March 23.

Vizna, March 8. The following Particulars are a large Account of the great Misfortune which has befallen the King of Sweden.

Iffur Aga, Caperzybasly, or great Usher of the Sultan, arrived at Bender the 30th of January O. S. with Letters of Command, which the Turks call Haliseriff, directed to the Han of the Tartars, containing an Answer to the Letter sent to the Sultan by the said Han, the Paschia of Bender, the grand Master of the Horse, or Imbricher Aga, and the Crausbasly. The Han upon receipt of these Letters, marched with some Troops out of Bender into the Territory of Lifcanor, where was the King of Sweden's Palace, called Warnitza. He took with him some Pieces of Artillery, which he planted on a convenient Spot of Ground against the King of Sweden's House, then distributed Powder and Ball together with some Grenadoes among his Men, and gave them order to make ready for Assault early the next Morning; after which he sent to four Polish Lords, who had been formerly with him, but afterwards joyned the King of Sweden, to know whether they would leave the King's Palace, or suffer the same Fate with him; they answered, That in fear of being delivered by the Han to King Augustus, they had taken Refuge there two Days before, but now they were ready to come to him, on Condition he would give them Letters of Protection signed by himself and the Lords there undernamed: The Han sent them such an Assurance in Writing. The next Day, January 31. O. S. the Turkish and Tartar Troops marched at Nine in the Morning out of Bender, under the command of Paschia, the grand Master of the Horse, Liusbasly, Mustapha Paschia, the Cadiz of Bender, and other great Officers, who taking with them twelve other Pieces of Cannon, caused the Gates of Bender to be shut, and marched directly to Warnitza, where being arrived they made a Disposition for the Attack, posting the Janizaries and the Tartars on one Side of the House, and the Troops they call Gebetty on the other, with the Artillery in the middle. The Polish Lords demanded a Guard, which being granted, they came out of the Palace. In the meantime the King of Sweden had sent the Sieur Crofius, his Chamberlain, to the Seraskier, to enquire the Meaning of this new Proceeding; who answered, it was owing to the King himself; adding, that he had now amused the Sultan for four Years, and refused to leave his Dominions according to his Directions, for which Reason he once more gave him Notice that he would not suffer him to stay any longer, and he must instantly leave the Place if he would preserve the Sultan's Friendship. Crofius replied, by Way of Question, How is it possible my Master should this moment quit his House, not having made the least Preparations for his Departure? The Seraskier interrupted him, saying he must immediately go with them to Bender, where he should have his choice of all the Houses in the City, or might remain for some Days in the Palace of the Seraskier, till he had prepared for his Journey. Crofius carried back this Answer, but returned in about a Quarter of an Hour to the Turkish Generals with a Message, That his Majesty desired they would let him remain in his House till he was ready to leave it, since it was impossible he should go immediately to Bender. Upon these Words, the Seraskier and others mounted their Horses, the Han at the same time giving a Signal to the Troops to make the Assault; the Cannon likewise began to play upon the House, but the Janizaries absolutely refused to act against the King, though the Cadiz himself read to them the Sultan's Orders, to which they pretended not to give Credit. The Han and the Turkish Officers finding they could not prevail upon the Janizaries, made them separate from the rest of the Troops and return to Bender, to which Place they carried back the greatest Part of the Cannon. But on Sunday, Feb. 1. O. S. all the Officers of the Janizaries came to the King of Sweden, promising him upon Oath their Protection and Assistance, and engaging that if his Majesty would surrender himself to them, they would conduct him safely to the Emperour. The Swedes answered, they would not depart whatever might be the Consequence. This Declaration having provoked the Janizaries, they fell upon them, put them to Flight, and made 300 Prisoners: And as the King continued to make a resolute Defence in his House, with a few Officers and Soldiers he had yet remaining, they bombarded it till the Evening, and finding he would not yet surrender, set fire to it in several Places, which obliged him to leave it. In these Attacks the Turks and Tartars had several killed, and among the rest four Agas and a Murza. At last the King was taken, and carried by the Janizaries to the Seraskier, who obliged him to get on Horseback, though he was wounded in the Hand and Face, with a Man on each Side to support him, in which Condition he caused him to be conducted to Bender and lodged in his Palace. After this the Seraskier distributed 1000 Crowns among the Janizaries that took him. It is said that Mustapha Paschia had an Order to conduct his Majesty to Salonica, which was to be put in Execution the 4th of February.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated March 23.

Vizna, March 11. P. S. Our Court has just received positive Advices which confirm all that has been related concerning the King of Sweden; adding, that he was kept 3 Days at Bender, and afterwards carried Prisoner to Thessalonica, or Salonica, with 65 Swedish Officers and Domesticks.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated March 14.

Vizna, March 8. Besides the Particulars of the burning the King of Sweden's House, and sending him under a Guard to Salonica, there are others concerning the Design of the Turks with Relation to the King of Sweden, which say, that they intend to detain his Majesty till he has reimbursed all the Sums advanced to him by the Ottoman Porte; But of this we cannot be assured but by Letters from Adrianople, which are expected with greater Impatience, because we cannot yet penetrate the true Design of the Turks in making such Preparations for War, which are greater than those they formerly made against Muscovy.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated March 14.

Vizna, March 11. Letters from Hungary continue to affirm, that the King of Sweden has been obliged to surrender himself to the Turks, and that Mustapha Bassa had Orders to conduct him to Salonica. Yet we have no News of this from Adrianople, and there are Letters from Jassi which make no Mention of it.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated March 20.
